In 'Chess:The Complete Self-tutor', however, each lesson is only taught once, or, at most, a few times. Also, whereas 'BFTC' uses a building block approach, whereby the level of difficulty is increased very gradually, this doesn't happen here, as the lessons, to some extent, stand alone, despite being grouped together in general categories.

Algebraic notation (or AN) is a method for recording and describing the moves in a game of chess. It is based on a system of coordinates to uniquely identify each square on the chessboard. It is now standard among all chess organizations and most books, magazines, and newspapers. In English-speaking countries, the parallel method of descriptive notation was generally used in chess publications ...

Algebraic notation (chess) - Wikipedia

chess tournament, you will need to understand how to read a chessboard. Though there have been many different methods used to keep track of a game throughout history, the best, most efficient method we use in chess today is called Algebraic Notation. Each chess square has a unique address, a name that is different from that of every other square.
